These expectations are consistent across the school and are referred to while in the classroom and in the yard.

If you have any questions please feel free to contact Adele Read or the Wellbeing team.

Taking Charge of Your Own Health

Health and well-being means something different to everyone and this course hopes to explore and learn about that idea together.

Let's talk about who is responsible for someone's health: Who gets to make health decisions for us? What role does a support network play in making choices? What is the responsibility of doctors and health workers? We're going to talk about the roles and responsibilities we each have for our own health and well-being and that of those that we support and care for.

We will discover how health and wellbeing support tools can be used: The facilitators will talk about some strategies and skills they know and have found useful, so that you can walk away with some ideas about where to start taking charge.

People should get to make choices about the way they want to support their own health and wellbeing: Discovery College is all about finding what works for you, so we'll also talk about how feeling empowered and like you have control over what happens to you and how you look after yourself can be valuable.
